A very important lesson to learn from Korah's mistake is the outcome of being self-righteous. Korah thought that he is as holy as Moses and Aaron and he envied them for the responsibilities that God gave them. He was not satisfied with his role as a servant of the tabernacle, since he was a Levi; rather he wanted higher authority and position. He completely forgot that everybody, after all, is serving God. This story shows the result of self-bride and self-righteousness.
